No. 885

9 June 1943

To the Director

[28 groups unrecovered][41 groups unrecoverable] she declared that: a) Marshall and King insisted upon not commencing ground operations in Europe, limiting themselves to bombardments, b) unless the Germans suffer [1 group unrecovered] in the east there will be no second front in Europe; the attack this summer will be in the Mediterranean. 2. Marshall [6 groups unrecovered] the possibility of its domination of Europe after the war. 3. King and other admirals who have the support of fascist circles [11 groups unrecovered] concerning mass attacks. For instance, American heavy bombers strongly [20 groups unrecovered] to make it possible for the Russian and German armies to wear down each other, then the Americans and British will be invited [to] military [66 groups unrecoverable] is in constant contact with the Germans through the International Bank at Basel.)

Information from Baldwin:

1. He repeated the word that there will be no second front in Europe [this] summer, that operations will be concentrated on [4 groups unrecovered][D~~x~~the Balkans], that Americans and British do not want to incur large losses, they are waiting for the Germans to open a new large offensive in the east and, if the USSR seems to be in a critical situation, the plans can be changed and an attack in France and Holland [65 groups unrecoverable] propagandize the idea that America's chief enemy is Japan.
